Dear Hiring Manager,

Fascinated by building solutions from just a concept, testing the idea, and successfully implementing the vision for optimal innovative solutions for the business and its clients, I deliver a sense of reassurance to any future organisation. As a 3rd-year candidate in information sciences with buildable experience over a growing career, I hope to gain more experience in the fields of application development and IT service delivery. I am a pragmatic individual enthusiastic about pursuing a sustainable career within your company, with the greatest of interests.

With progressive experience in application design and project management, I hope to gain more experience in software and web development and programming, project management, application development and automation, and PC hardware and software infrastructure support, including troubleshooting and repairs. I am able to support the improvement and quality of IT projects by prioritising and delegating day-to-day tasks with understanding and diligence. I provide value-driven and technological solutions based on knowledge absorbed and trending innovation as I complete my Bachelor of Computer and Information Sciences in Application Development.

Lecturers and fellow students recognize me as a goal-oriented and trustworthy collaborator who is accurate with solutions based on evidence and research, competitive with a supportive presence. I can ensure that the business and its clients' systems align with IT legislative policies, thereby contributing to the organisation's security. To secure employment at a company that maintains a competitive advantage in the 21st century, I surpass expectations in any environment.

Sincerely,

Khatija Essa
